Answer on page 13.

Finish the drawing and identify the famous Irish fossil mammal. When it's finished you can colour it in.

This large mammal became extinct at the end of the last Ice Age. The males had prominent antlers that reached 4 metres across, and these were shed and re-grown each year. They were used for fighting and attracting a mate. During the summer it lived in mountainous areas but moved down in the winter to sheltered valleys where living conditions were less harsh.
